Notes for Peyton Callahan Randolph:

Oral Tradition Posted 09 Feb 2012 by sueleejohnson

Peyton Callahan Randolph Peyton left home while in his early teens and walked to California during the gold rush. Later, he joined the Confederate Army. After an absence of approximately eleven years, he returned to his old home place. While there, he asked his mother for some food. Not recognizing him, she feed him and told him of the son she had that left all several years before looking for gold. He told her that he was this long lost son. She would not believe him until he removed his shoe and revealed a foot that missing one toe. His foot had been stepped on by a cow when he was very young and one toe had been severed-as in the Bible, the prodigal son had arrived. He told of his journeys home where he had traveled with a few other men. They had gotten so hungry and weak in their travels that they had thrown away their rifles and anything else that was no longer necessary. They eventually killed a dove and was so hungry that they ate it before they could get pluck all feathers off. His mother, Elizabeth Fields Randolph, wanted him to marry a young widow by the name of Sarah Wallis Gilbert. They fell in love and eventually had seven children. Those children being Frank, Isom Peyton, John, Jack, Rose, Cordelia and Crease. Submitted: This story was passed down to me [internet submission] via my Grandmother Effie May Lamberth McClintock
